ELEMENTS OF THE COMET.

Further Facts and Theories Results of Ob- to collections. servations in Cambridge and Washington

—A Talk with Professor Boss, of the Dudley Observatory.

Boston, Sept. 22 .- An approximate 000 miles. This corresponds to a rate of speed of 1,500,000 miles a day. As-ing this result to Europe. The elements of the great comet of 1843, of which the new comet is supposed to be a reappearance, are as follows: Perihelion passage, February 27, 1843; longitude of perihelion, 278 degrees thirty-nine minutes; longitude of node, one degree twelve minutes; inclination of orbit, thirty-live degrees forty-one minutes; perih-lion distance, 508,200 miles. The comet of 1843 was one of the finest of the century. It had a tail sixty degrees long, and its orbit is remarkable for its small perihelion distance. The period assigned to this comet by Hubbord is 376 years.

Washington, Sept. 22.—All day Professors Frisby and Skinner have been calculating on the orbit of the great comet. The peculiar situation of the comet on the successive days of observation, combined with the corresponding relations in space, has rendered this task one of unusual difficulty. This difficulty in obtaining accuson of the small intervals of time between the observations employed. The first was taken by Frisby at 3 p. m. on Friday, September 19. The second by Winlock at 11 a.m. on September 20, and the third by Skinner on Sept. 21. The elements of the orbit as found by Professors Frisby and Skinner are these; Perihelion passage Greenwich time, 5 p. m., September 17; longitude of the node, 326 degrees, 27 minutes; node to perihelion, 70 degrees, 57 min-utes; inclination, 37 degrees, 48 min-utes; perihelion distance, 800,000 miles;

Professor Boss, of the Dudley observatory, said to-day: "As computed by these gentlemen the accordance of the connecting is great comet of 1880 is all that could have been expected, even were it known to a certainty that the two bodies were one and the same. In order that it may be seen how close is the corresdence of the above elements with those of the 1880 comet, the latter are given from the recent calculations of Meyer. They are: Longitude of node, 356 degrees, 17 minutes; node to perihelion, 77 degrees, 54 minutes; inclin ation. 36 degrees, 52 minutes; perihelion distance 544,000 miles. It will thus be seen that the inclination varies less than one degree, and the perihelion distance less than 300,000 miles. This difference and the difference between the longitudes of the nodes are quite within the errors of calculations data. The element in the present computation which is theoretically the nost certain is the inclination, and this differs less than one degree from that of the 1880 comet.

"Furthermore, when the present ela-ments are projected backward to find the place of the comet on September 11, it is found that the place of the Rio Janeiro comet of that date is not the only supposition that can be made with the first orbit of a comet—that of motion in a parabola. But if this is the 1880 comet the orbit, instead of being open, is elliptical, and therefore closed. The forced neglect of this fact affects all the elements and notably the perihelion distance. Thus all facts point to the conclusion that when the present elements are corrected they will be found to correspond more nearly with those of the 1880 comet. All ompetent astronomers who examine the question, in the light of the facts presented, will assent to the soundness
